Administrative History:

Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary (APTS) was established in Austin, Texas in 1902 by Dr. Robert Lewis Dabney and the Rev. Richmond Kelley Smoot with the mission of educating and equipping ministers for the Southwestern United States, and the central-Austin campus community is still pursuing those goals today. The mission statement of APTS is:

For the glory of God and to proclaim the gospel of Jesus Christ, Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary is a seminary in the Presbyterian-Reformed tradition whose mission is to educate and equip individuals for the ordained Christian ministry and other forms of Christian service and leadership; to employ its resources in the service of the church; to promote and engage in critical theological thought and research; and to be a winsome and exemplary community of God's people.

McCord Building:

McCord Community Center

Construction photographs, from Peggy Clark (Board of Trustees member), 1995

McCord Community Center construction photograph album, compiled by Dennis D. Roetman, Maintenance Chief, [1996-029], 1994-1996

Photographs, taken from fall 1994 to summer 1996, documenting the construction of the James I. and Hazel McCord Community Center. The photographs place the Center in geographical context to other structures on the Seminary campus, in particular, Currie Hall, Lubbock Hall, the McMillan Classroom Building and the Chapel. Upon completion of the McCord Center, Lubbock Hall, the last of the Seminary's original buildings, was razed in September 1996. The photographs also document the new parking area, the replacement of the campus central chiller system and the new A/C equipment in the basement of the McMillan Classroom Building.
